KCNA

Kim Jong Un, general secretary of the Workers' Party of Korea and president of the State Affairs of the DPRK, delivered an opening address at the Second Conference of Secretaries of Primary Committees of the WPK on February 26.

First, he expressed his pleasure to personally extend his gratitude to the secretaries of primary committees, who have taken more trouble for the Party and the state in the basic Party organizations than others over the last five years since the gathering of secretaries of primary committees of the WPK which was the first of its kind in its history.

He said that the main secret of our Party's overcoming unprecedented challenges and ordeals and leading the revolution in a firm and correct way in recent years can be ascribed to the fact that secretaries of primary committees discharged their duties properly in the basic organizations of the Party. He extended warm and militant greetings to the secretaries of primary committees, who took part in the conference with the pride of having made a positive contribution to the development of the Party and the vigorous advance of socialist construction, and all other secretaries of primary committees of the entire Party, who are striving to implement the decisions made at the Party Congress and the plenary meetings of the Party Central Committee, being in charge of the basic fighting units in the implementation of the Party's policies.

He mentioned the purpose of the Party Central Committee that attaches special importance to the conference.

It is stipulated in the Rules of the Party that the conference of secretaries of primary committees of the Party should be convened every five years, he said, adding that this is aimed at orienting all the activities of primary committees of the Party towards the implementation of the fighting programme indicated by a Party congress. He also said that the work of the basic organizations of the Party should be often reviewed and appraised so as to thoroughly ensure unity in thinking and action of the entire Party, adding that this fully conforms with the idea of attaching importance to developing the basic organizations of the Party, the line of strengthening the entire Party and the requirements of the Jucheoriented Party building and activities.

Saying that if all the organizations of the Party achieve unity in thinking and action and vigorously carry on the struggle as one, there would be nothing impossible, he added that this is clearly proved by the course of the last year's struggle.

He referred to the fact that the Party Central Committee has prioritized the work of strengthening primary Party organizations as one of the two tasks of strengthening the entire Party along with the work of strengthening Party cells, and has directed sustained great efforts to it.

Saying that it is a source of pride of our Party and key factor and secret of its invincibility that it has firm foundations and reliable basic organizations, he stressed that the basic Party organizations are not maintained and enhanced spontaneously, and this work should continuously be deepened along with the advancing revolution and construction.

An important purpose of this conference is to review the past five-year work of primary Party organizations from a critical point of view and identify the major link in the whole chain of efforts for improving and strengthening the work of primary Party organizations in conformity with the remarkably high requirements of the developing revolution, so as to make it known to the secretaries of all primary Party organizations and arouse them once again.

Calling for all the participants to carry out a cool review of their units' work and actively learn from and share the experience and good methods of excellent primary Party organizations by attending the conference with high political awareness, consciousness and clear purposefulness, he underscored the need to make this conference an epochal occasion for boosting the organizing ability, fighting efficiency and activity of every primary Party organization and a turning point in raising the political and practical qualifications of the secretaries of primary Party organizations to a new high.

Expressing his belief that the conference will set up another important milestone in further strengthening the basic organizations of the Party and making innovation in Party work as required by the new stage of struggle to achieve the comprehensive development of socialist construction, he declared the conference open.

Second Conference of Secretaries of Primary Committees of WPK held under the guidance of General Secretary Kim Jong Un

KCNA

The Second Conference of Secretaries of Primary Committees of the Workers' Party of Korea opened in Pyongyang on February 26 at a time when all the Party members and other people are ushering in a new great era of national prosperity with great confidence in victory, true to the grand blueprint unrolled by the Party Central Committee.

The conference, the second of its kind in the history of the WPK, served as a significant occasion in accelerating the all-people general advance for bringing about the comprehensive development of socialist construction by more firmly consolidating all the primary Party organizations into the combat ranks of loyalty, in which the Party's unified leadership system is thoroughly established, and the vanguard units for carrying out the Party's policies and by cementing the political and ideological position of the Korean revolution in every way, in hearty response to the idea and spirit of the Eighth Congress of the WPK.

The proud reality, in which the might of the single-minded unity and harmonious whole formed between the leader, Party and masses is being signally increased and great creation and changes are made in all sectors of socialist construction despite the severe challenges and difficulties unprecedented in history, is a brilliant fruition of the idea and line of the Party Central Committee, which has steadily enhanced the fighting efficiency of primary Party organizations, the basic organizations and main combat units of the Party, on attaching importance to and strengthening primary Party organizations.

The Second Conference of Secretaries of Primary Committees of the WPK analyzed and reviewed the achievements and experience, mistakes and their causes in the work of primary Party organizations in the period after the First Conference of Chairpersons of the Primary Committees of the WPK and discussed the measures for further improving and strengthening the work of primary Party organizations, as required by the Korean revolution which entered a new period of great upsurge and turn.

Attending the conference were

All the participants in the conference were full of profound reverence for and trust in the Party Central Committee which has guided the work for enhancing the fighting efficiency of the basic Party organizations, while prioritizing the work for strengthening primary Party organizations, the political staffs of relevant units in building the Juche-oriented revolutionary party and accomplishing the cause of socialist construction.

Central Committee of the WPK, the important events of particular note in the history of the Juche revolution.

The General Secretary ushered in a new heyday in building basic Party organizations with his outstanding idea and energetic leadership, regarding it as fundamentals for developing the whole Party to strengthen primary Party organizations, he noted.

The original ideas and theories of the General Secretary, who comprehensively clarified the position and duty of primary Party committees and the tasks and ways for strengthening them at the Conference of Chairpersons of Primary Party Committees, the first of its kind in the history of the WPK, and other major Party meetings, serve as the important guidelines to be adhered to in the Party building and in innovating the work of primary Party committees, he stressed.

He referred to the fact that the General Secretary wisely led primary Party committees to focus their work on thoroughly implementing the Party's lines and policies and major revolutionary tasks by giving full play to the spiritual strength of the masses.

The reporter recalled that during his field guidance, the General Secretary underlined the need for primary Party committees to intensify the education in the leadership exploits of the Party and the five-point education, properly guide the organizational and ideological life of Party members, ensure the three-way unity and make devoted service for the people run through the Party work. The General Secretary also underlined the need to enhance the role of ri Party committees so as to train agricultural workers to be those in charge of the rural revolution and ardent patriots, he added.

During his guidance of the revolution, the General Secretary called beside him secretaries of primary Party committees, reposed great trust in them by calling them political commissars of main combat units for the implementation of the Party's policies, taught them the principle and ways of the Party work and the best methods of mobilizing the spiritual strength of the masses, he stressed, adding that thanks to the meticulous care of the great teacher, secretaries of primary Party committees have fulfilled their responsibilities.

Primary Party organizations are displaying their might as the vanguard of loyalty in which the iron discipline of moving as one under the unified leadership of the Party Central Committee has been established, and as the organizations thoroughly implementing the politics based on the people-first principle by responsibly taking care of the destiny and life of people and as the main fighting sub-units for devotedly implementing the lines and policies of the Party, he noted, terming it an invaluable fruition of the outstanding idea and leadership of the General Secretary.

By reflecting the unanimous minds of the participants in the conference and the secretaries of all the primary Party committees, the reporter extended the highest glory and warmest greetings to Kim Jong Un, the great leader of the WPK and the Korean revolution who is further strengthening the WPK into an ever-victorious guiding force and energetically leading the struggle for a fresh victory in socialist construction.

The report referred to the successes and experience gained in the struggle for carrying out the militant tasks set forth at the First Conference of Chairpersons of Primary Party Committees.

It also cited in detail the achievements made by primary Party organizations in the course of focusing the Party work on devotedly defending and thoroughly establishing the unified leadership system of the Party Central Committee, successfully implementing the strategic plans of the Party Central Committee and preparing themselves to be the vanguard of loyalty thinking and acting true to the idea and will of the leader only.

It pointed out that a revolutionary climate of thoroughly implementing Party decisions without fail has been established in primary Party committees.

It stressed that the course of adopting Party decisions in all the primary Party committees has turned into the course of mobilizing the ideological power, mapping out plans and assigning tasks and the trait of implementing Party decisions unconditionally, thoroughly and correctly has been fully displayed with the Fifth Plenary Meeting of the Seventh Party Central Committee and the Eighth Party Congress as watersheds.

The reporter referred to the valuable successes the primary Party organizations made in establishing firm links based on blood ties between a broad spectrum of people and the Party as a result of their efforts for applying the spirit of devoted service for the people to the practice of the Party work.

The past five-year struggle proves that only when primary Party organizations and the secretaries of primary Party committees remain true to the idea and leadership of the leader, thoroughly implement the Party's decision without fail and establish the traits of making devoted service for the people as a Party climate, the political and ideological position of the Party and revolution can be further consolidated and the socialist cause be vigorously advanced in any trials and difficulties, the reporter said.

The report reviewed the shortcomings in the work of some primary Party organizations which failed to fulfill the urgent requirements of the Party and the revolution.

Strictly analyzed and criticized were a series of mistakes made by primary Party organizations, including the issue of failing to regard the work for establishing the unified leadership system of the Party Central Committee as the lifeline of the Party work and strongly push forward it, the issue of failing to build up the ranks of cadres and the Party ranks into an elite force and efficiently conduct the work for rallying the broad masses behind the Party and the issue of impeding the implementation of the Party's policies by failing to properly provide the Party's guidance over the fulfilment of the main revolutionary tasks in the fields and units in their charge.

Blaming secretaries of primary Party committees for conducting the work without the main point, forgetful of the trust and expectation of the Party which put them forward as officials responsible for the Party organizations of their units, the reporter termed it the main causes of shortcomings revealed in the work of primary Party organizations in the past.

The reality shows that if the secretaries of primary Party committees fail to enhance their political awareness and practical ability and prepare themselves to be perfect in all aspects, including working methods and working manner, it is impossible for them to implement the idea of the Party Central Committee of giving importance to primary Party committees and make a substantial change and improvement in the work of their units, he said.

The secretaries of primary Party committees should sternly review the past five-year work and bring about a radical turn in the work of the primary Party committees, as required by the noble intention of the Party Central Committee and the developing revolution, he noted.

Then he detailed the tasks to be fulfilled in strengthening primary Party organizations into the vanguard units sharing the idea and intention with the Party Central Committee and acting in concert with it, and into the political staffs greatly encouraging their units to implement the decisions of the Party Congress.

He also underlined the need for primary Party organizations to firmly unite the revolutionary ranks as an integral whole by developing the work for establishing the unified leadership system of the Party Central Committee onto a new high stage.

He referred to the need to wage an intense ideological offensive for arming officials, Party members and other working people with the revolutionary idea of the respected General Secretary and to hold fast to championing and glorifying the revolutionary relics and leadership exploits of the leaders as the main task of the work of primary Party committees.

He called for strengthening the ranks of Party cell secretaries and making scrupulous arrangements for turning all the Party cells into healthy and viable ones closely knitted in the bonds of kinship.

He said it is necessary to do work with the masses in a creative and active way in consideration of their individual characters and steer the youth league and other working people's organizations to focus efforts on their internal work so as to make the officials and employees of each unit patriotic socialist workers.

He called for thoroughly carrying out fighting tasks set forth by the Party by further intensifying policy-oriented guidance and political guidance to ensure that administrative and economic work is only conducted as thought and intended by the Party Central Committee.

He stressed the need to firmly consolidate the revolutionary and class position of rural areas and achieve the radical development of agricultural productive forces and the fundamental change of rural living environment by increasing the functions and role of rural ri Party committees in every way and stepping up the three revolutions—ideological, technological and cultural—so as to creditably realize the Party's programme of socialist rural construction.

He called on the primary Party organizations of the entire Party to regard it as an important requirement for boosting the fighting efficiency of the Party and a critical matter linked with the destiny of the socialist cause to break with formalism and the inclination towards administrative aspects, the worst anathema to Party work, and to wage an intensive struggle against them.

He stressed that all the secretaries of primary Party committees will have to bear in mind the noble intention of the General Secretary and bring about a new change in their work so as to make a positive contribution to strengthening the Party and achieving the overall development of socialist construction.

Then, speeches were made by Pak Song Jin, secretary of the primary Party committee at the Mangyongdae Revolutionary Museum, Kim Ju Chon, secretary of the primary Party committee at the Sinpho Fishery Station, Kim Chol Min, secretary of the primary Party committee at the Sogu Public Building Construction Company under the Pyongyang Municipal Management Bureau for Construction, Kim Hak Jong, secretary of the primary Party committee at the Ministry of Mining Industry, Kim Man Bok, secretary of the primary Party committee of the February 20 Factory, Ryom Kyong Chun, secretary of the primary Party committee at the ammonium nitrate workshop of the Hungnam Fertilizer Complex, Kim Myong Il, secretary of the primary Party committee at the Sangwon Limestone Mine under the Sangwon Cement Complex, and Kim Kyong Chol, secretary of the primary Party committee at the Pyongyang Daily Necessities Factory.

Speakers analyzed and reviewed in depth the achievements and experience gained by primary Party organizations for the past period. The participants were deeply moved by the experience of the primary Party committees of the Mangyongdae Revolutionary Museum and the Sinpho Fishery Station which firmly prepared their employees to be genuine loyalists and ardent revolutionaries reliably defending their honourable posts of adding lustre to the revolutionary history of the great leaders, and to be standard bearers for implementing the Party's policies on fishery by intensifying the education in loyalty among them, regarding it as their very lifeline.

Introduced were the experience gained by the primary Party committee of the Sangwon Limestone Mine of the Sangwon Cement Complex which has boosted the limestone production by steadily increasing the power of ideology and collectivism, and the experience of the primary Party committee of the ammonium nitrate workshop of the Hungnam Fertilizer Complex which performed great miracles and innovations in implementing the Party's policies in the course of winning the title of the Twice Three-Revolution Red Flag, deeming the mass-based movement a powerful means.

The participants were greatly touched by the experience of the secretaries of primary Party committees who shared joy and sorrow with their employees at the production sites with the traits and qualifications befitting frontline political workers, always paying deep attention to their family life and solving problems by the Party's method and the political method. Speeches seriously criticized and reviewed the mistakes some primary Party organizations made by failing to push ahead with the work for implementing the Party's policies as their primary task and disturbing the development of the units in their charge by working without the Party principle.

The speakers expressed their resolution to wage a dynamic struggle for bringing about the comprehensive development of socialist construction by steadily intensifying the work for transforming primary Party committees into elite ones strong in the organizing ability, fighting efficiency and practical ability, true to the noble intention of the General Secretary.

Kim Jong Un makes important conclusion at Second Conference of Secretaries of Primary Committees of WPK

KCNA

On February 28, the respected Comrade Kim Jong Un delivered a concluding speech, entitled Secretaries of Primary Party Committees Should Become Genuine Political Workers of the Motherly Party, at the Second Conference of Secretaries of Primary Committees of the Workers' Party of Korea.

Saying that the entire Party and all the people pin very great expectations on the current conference of secretaries of primary Party committees, the second of its kind in the history of the WPK, General Secretary Kim Jong Un referred to the significance of the conference convened at a crucial time of the Korean revolution.

Saying that it is possible to strengthen the whole Party and bring about an upswing on all fronts of socialist construction only when all the primary Party committees, the lower-echelon organizations of the Party and main fighting units for implementing the Party's policies, are well prepared and active, he stressed that in the light of that aspect it is of great significance at this crucial time to comprehensively examine and judge once again the fighting efficiency of primary Party organizations and instill the idea and strategic intention of the Party Central Committee into the secretaries of primary Party committees.

He appreciated that the current conference again established a unanimous view on the importance and urgency of improving the work of primary Party committees, analyzed and reviewed in detail the achievements and defects in the course of strengthening those committees and deeply discussed realistic ways.

He summarized the clear and positive changes made in the work of primary Party committees in the past five years, including the fact that all the primary Party committees have focused their work on turning the units in their charge into the honest ones sharing idea and intention with the Party Central Committee and acting in concert with it, while exercising firm control and guidance over every work, ranging from the setting of goals to review and estimation, out of the firm stand that they should implement the Party's decisions and national economic plans without fail in keeping with their mission as the political staffs of the relevant units.

He referred to the importance of sternly reviewing not only the past achievements but also the defects and drawing a lesson from them, for the conference is aimed at future development.

He referred to the important tasks to be upheld and fulfilled primarily at present by secretaries of primary Party committees, political workers of a people's party, their "servant" party.

Saying that it is the steadfast will and the ultimate goal of our Party to consistently carry on the revolution and construction by dint of trust in and love for the people, unconditionally serve the people and build an ideal communist society for the people without fail, he stressed that the Party struggles to protect and care for the people with sincerity, bring happiness to them and satisfy their interests, not for any ism or prestige.

He pointed out that every line and policy put forward by the Party, its tested leadership ability and invincible fighting efficiency and construction of our style of socialism powerfully led by it are all characterized by the ideals of "The people are God" and "devoted service for the people."

To be a people's party, a "servant" party for them, is the single reason of our Party's existence, its highest hallmark and its permanent feature.

Our Party's goal to become a true people's party that bestows all sorts of loving care on the people and its creed to become a "servant" party that goes to great pains for the people can never change.

The main purpose of our building a new world on this land despite difficulties is not to demonstrate that we are capable of overcoming difficulties but to take care of the people with warmer sincerity and bring the happiest life to them.

Secretaries of primary Party committees, who are responsible for forming a firm link between the intentions and feelings of the Party Central Committee with the minds of the employees of the units in their charge, should ardently love the people and show all sincerity for them.

It is the highest honour of secretaries of primary Party committees to serve the people and care for them with sincerity. It is the invariable assignment given by the Party Central Committee to secretaries of primary committees of the entire Party to become true political workers of a people's party, their "servant" party.

The work by secretaries of primary Party committees and their qualities will as ever be evaluated by how much they play the role of a mother, a "servant", devotedly serving the people.

To be very humble before the people, regard it as their natural duty and the greatest worth of living to go through thick and thin and work devotedly to ensure the best convenience and life for the people constitutes the main attitude and traits our Party's Party now requires secretaries of primary Party committees to acquire.

It is not easy to do so, but from now on they should make a devoted forced march for the people by staking the dignity and prestige of our Party, a party for the people and a "servant" party for them without an equal in the world.

It is high time for our Party officials to get closer to the people and treat them more kindly.

Kim Jong Un referred to the tasks secretaries of primary Party committees should concentrate on and channel efforts into in discharging the role of a genuine mother and faithful servant.

He went on:

One of them is to train officials, Party members and other working people in their units into socialist persons with excellent political and moral traits and the other is to dynamically conduct the organizational and political work to implement the decisions of the Party Congress and the plenary meetings of the Party Central Committee.

In other words, the first thing is to transform the ideological consciousness of the people, and the second thing is to turn into reality our Party's policies of promoting the people's well-being.

This fully complies with the true nature, mission and fighting purpose of our Party.

Secretaries of all primary Party committees should be well aware of their mission as political workers of the people's party, a "servant" party for them, and make Party work serve this purpose.

First of all, they should prepare officials, Party members and other working people in their units to be politically and morally sound.

For our mothers, nothing brings more pleasure to them than to see their sons and daughters becoming admirable persons capable of devoting themselves for the country and fellow people and genuine persons faithfully serving society and the collectives and keeping moral obligations.

That is why they worry so much about their children and sometimes beat them to bring them up to be upright.

A priority task for our Party to do for our people is to bring up all persons to be wonderful beings with the same sincere loving care as those mothers do for their children.

Important here is to make people learn and embody high political awareness and the revolutionary outlook on morality.

Kim Jong Un called on secretaries of primary Party committees to direct their main efforts to well preparing people in their units so as to fully guarantee them politically and morally before the Party and the revolution. He referred to the principled issues arising in earnestly and effectively doing education of the people to enhance their political awareness and outlook on morality.

Stagnation and retreat in the economic work can be recovered but stagnation and retreat in the education of the people would bring irrevocable consequences, he said, stressing the need for primary Party organizations to effectively and steadily conduct the work of enhancing the people's political and moral consciousness before getting concerned about the implementation of economic plans and the state of production.

Education through revolutionary artefacts and the leadership exploits of the Kim Jong Un is the roots of our Party's ideological work, and it can be called the starting point of ideological education, he said, adding that it is entirely what secretaries of primary Party committees should do to make all Party members and other working people set the goal of their life on the road of loyalty and patriotism and find the worth and honour of their life on this road, and educate them to fulfill their moral obligation as human beings before society and the collective.

He defined it as the core of the administration of revolutionary artefacts to make sure that our people's reverence for their leaders and the Party become part of their ideological and moral traits. He underlined the need for secretaries of primary Party committees to give precedence to building well and managing and operating regularly the educational bases like Kimilsungism-Kimjongilism Study Hall, room for the education in the revolutionary artefacts and room dedicated to the history of the unit, and thus make sure that Party members and other working people nurture loyalty, faith and moral obligation for the Party and carry on the noble fighting spirit displayed by those of the preceding generations of the revolution.

High political awareness and noble moral traits can become enhanced and part of life only through organizational life and practice, he said, calling on secretaries of primary Party committees to establish strong organizational discipline and make organizational and ideological life regularized and standardized in all cases to make all the people train themselves politically and morally under the continued guidance of the organization and assistance by the collective.

Saying that revolutionary practice is a wonderful school for training people, he stressed that secretaries of primary Party committees should not just wait for examples of the times to be produced from their units but purposefully organize the work to train all their employees through revolutionary practice to be patriotic working people and innovators who love their factories, jobs and hometowns.

Secretaries of primary Party committees should respect and put forward those who faithfully fulfil their own duties without seeking any honour and appraisal, and inspire the masses with the positive example of the said persons so as to increase the ranks of faithful socialist working people, he said, stressing the need for the secretaries to lead the employees of their units to teach and learn from each other, share good experiences and admonish against defects so that they would do things beneficial to the collective and display noble and beautiful moral traits.

Kim Jong Un emphasized that secretaries of primary Party committees should launch dynamic organizational and political work for implementing the decisions of the Eighth Party Congress and the plenary meetings of the Party Central Committee and thereby bring about substantial achievements. He went on:

The decisions of the Party Congress and the plenary meetings of the Party Central Committee reflect the firm determination and will of our Party to remove the troubles of the people at the earliest date and provide them with a stabler and more improved life at any cost.

Therefore, our Party officials, secretaries of primary Party committees in particular, should fulfil their responsibilities so that major decisions of the Party bear good fruit.

It is important to definitely turn the struggle for implementing the Party's decisions into the work of the masses of the people themselves.

What our Party believes most in the present struggle for winning new victory in socialist construction in the face of unprecedented difficulties and trials is the spiritual strength of the masses.

Though the Party has adopted right decisions, they will remain an empty talk if the masses are not motivated.

Secretaries of primary Party committees should encourage Party members and other working people to turn out voluntarily in implementing the Party's policies by making them clearly understand that those policies are just for the sake of themselves, that no one can replace them in implementing the policies and that only when each unit thoroughly carries out the Party's decisions, will the state affairs be successful and the people's living improve.

Secretaries of primary Party committees should make sure that all the employees become clearly aware of their units' work plans for implementing the decisions of the Party Congress and the plenary meetings of the Party Central Committee, and steadily remind them of the plans, not just feeling content after reminding them once or twice.

They should make exacting demand on the masses so that they review the daily implementation of the Party's decisions and make redoubled effort, regarding the decisions as the standard and goal for their work. They should also discuss the innovative ways for the development of their units with the employees so as to give play to their creative initiative.

Secretaries of primary Party committees should be always mindful of this and conduct political work in a fresh and aggressive way to make sure that every workplace seethes with active drive for implementing the Party's decisions and the national economic plans.

In order to make officials, Party members and other working people creditably carry out their tasks with proper stand and attitude towards the implementation of the Party's decisions, they should effectively do the review and evaluation.

They should take measures in advance to solve problems that may arise in implementing the Party's decisions and undertake to solve bottleneck problems themselves to ensure their timely solution. By doing so, they can ensure that the soaring passion of the masses does not cool down.

General Secretary Kim Jong Un said that an important issue which secretaries of primary Party committees should pay heed to in implementing the Party's decisions is to train scientific and technical forces of their own units and intensify the Party guidance in depth to make sure that they pay off.

Whether scientific and technical talents pay off or not depends on Party officials.

Secretaries of primary Party committees who are well aware of the Party's idea of attaching importance to science and technology and talented persons and have sizeable knowledge of science and technology related with their own fields can be effective in doing the work with the talented persons.

They should know all the technical forces and talented persons of their units, throw full weight behind them, provide conditions for work and be responsible for their inquiry and its results so that each of them could do their share.

Science and technology development plan should be included in the work plan of primary Party committees as an important item, and through the work for implementing it, the level of the technicians and skilled workers should be raised and their ranks be expanded.

Secretaries of primary Party committees should always pay close attention to the effective operation of sci-tech learning spaces and encourage officials and employees to intensify scientific and technological study.

Primary Party committees should assign sci-tech study task to officials and employees and strictly review their implementation so as to make them regard sci-tech study as the requirement of Party policy and turn the course of study into a process of steadily raising the level of their technical skill.

They should provide Party support to establishing the traits of always giving precedence to science and technology in carrying out the Party's decisions and the national economic plans and of solving knotty problems on the strength of science and technology and mass technical innovation.

Whether the Party's decisions related to a unit are implemented or not depends largely on whether the Party, the administrative and technical officials achieve three-way unity or not, the General Secretary said.

He pointed out the principles to be maintained in the work of secretaries of primary Party committees, leading members in achieving the three-way unity. The principles include the issue of putting forward administrative and technical officials and respecting their opinions, the issue of providing Party support so that the employees seriously approach the directives of the administrative and technical officials and carry them out in time.

He also mentioned the importance of welfare supply service in boosting the enthusiasm of Party members and other working people who have turned out in implementing the Party's decisions.

Stressing the need for secretaries of primary Party committees to bring about major improvement in the supply service work for the employees through strenuous efforts with firm determination to solve the problems concerning their living conditions at any cost, he said that the supply service work of each unit is what the secretary of the primary Party committee concerned should be responsible for from A to Z and that the supply service work in the true sense of the word is the one which gives substantial benefits to the employees under any conditions.

Pointing out the issues arising in enhancing supply service work while thoroughly obeying the state unified guidance and management over the economic work and giving precedence to the state interests, he called for rejuvenating the foundation of supply service work to suit the specific features of units and changing conditions and for rationalizing supply service system and method.

Kim Jong Un stressed the need to thoroughly prevent accidents in all units.

He said that the secretaries of primary Party committees should learn about and examine the state of their own units in detail on a regular basis and with direct responsibility, establish a revolutionary system and order, ensure that all the officials, Party members and other working people work and live as required by the system and order, and conduct in a far-sighted way the work of removing all the accident-prone elements from the viewpoint of prioritizing safety, and called for taking effective measures to find out and correct defects concerning the life and safety of the people in particular.

Kim Jong Un set forth the ways for making primary Party committees live and active groups with strong fighting efficiency and cohesion.

Whoever is the secretary of a primary Party committee should throw himself into turning it into a solid political and ideological position with vibrant combat ranks, which reliably fulfils the duty of a post entrusted by the Party and the revolution, he said, calling for making primary Party committees the integral whole of loyalty sharing ideology, intention and action with the Party Central Committee, both in name and reality.

He stressed that the starting point and the general orientation of the work of primary Party committees is to help officials and Party members cherish the unwavering faith that does not deviate from the only path of following the Party Central Committee however the situation and the environment may change.

Secretaries of primary Party committees should make the officials and Party members regard it as the most sacred duty and supreme honour to follow the revolutionary ideas of the Party Central Committee as absolute truth, to rely on them in doing everything and to absolutely support and uphold with single mind its intention and plan, he said.

They should put efforts into staffing well their primary Party committees, the political staff of their own units, and enhancing the role of their members, he stressed.

Strengthening primary Party committees presupposes strengthening Party cells, he said, adding:

When all the Party cells in their units become healthy and vibrant cells, primary Party committees can become vibrant groups with strong fighting efficiency and cohesion.

Secretaries of primary Party committees should keep intensifying the work with Party cell secretaries responsible for the cell work, not forgetting it even a moment.

Those core members who are supported and trusted by the Party members should be made to take charge of the Party cells. Secretaries of primary Party committees should exact high demand on Party cell secretaries to make them put all efforts into their work while constantly reminding themselves of the 10-point tasks and 12-point traits of Party cell secretaries, and strive to enhance the level of their working ability.

In order to make Party cells healthy and vibrant ones closely knitted in the bonds of kinship, it is necessary to create examples, generalize experience and put all the Party cells in each unit on the level required by the Party Central Committee.

As they are also members of Party cells, secretaries of primary Party committees should give positive influence on the Party members and help the secretaries of Party cells by setting an example in the manner of treating Party cell secretaries and in the attitude of receiving Party assignments and executing them.

Saying that the results of the work of preparing the Party members and other working people politically and morally and the work of implementing the Party's decisions depend on how secretaries of primary Party committees conduct the work with people, he taught the issues arising for secretaries of primary Party committees in fundamentally improving the work with the people.

Saying that in order to do the work with people well, secretaries of primary Party committees should find themselves among the employees to correctly examine their mind and personality, he stressed that they should strive to deepen friendly feelings with the employees and lend an ear to their honest voices and appeal while doing work together with them and talking to them all the time.

He called upon secretaries of primary Party committees to conduct the work with people in a creative way to suit their characters.

He also called upon them to steadily find the effective ways and use them flexibly by keeping in mind that they cannot expect any achievement if they do the work with people in a stereotyped manner.

He said that just as a mother speaks differently to her son and daughter and treats them differently in their growth stages, secretaries of primary Party committees should do the work with people creatively to suit the characters of each person and the given situations even though their employees number hundreds or thousands.

He indicated in detail the ways of doing the work with different groups of people like the youth who have strong enterprising spirit and who are always vibrant, women who are always considerate of their children and family life and the persons who made a mistake in their work and life.

He called upon secretaries of primary Party committees to take warm care of their employees.

He said that what is common in the work of those units in which everything goes well is that the secretaries of primary Party committees strive to solve even one more problem arising in the living of the employees while paying close attention to it.

Saying that employees are moved when secretaries of primary Party committees call in on them to ask them about their difficulties and sufferings, and they feel very grateful for the Party officials and hold dear their care when they get to know that the Party officials take pains for them, he called on secretaries of primary Party committees to take warmer care of the employees and show sincerity to helping them out of difficulties, always paying close attention to them.

He said that secretaries of primary Party committees should make it their habit to relieve the employees of their sufferings and resolve their knotty problems at any cost, conscious of their duty as the servants of the people, and kindly treat all the employees as family members, just like a mother who treats her children without discrimination.

He stressed the need for secretaries of primary Party committees to maintain the principle while seriously and maturely doing the work with people.

Saying that it is the greatest taboo to regard the words of one or two persons as absolute or thoughtlessly deal with the issues arising among people on the basis of a superficial view or guess, he underlined the need for secretaries of primary Party committees to do the work with people in an unbiased and mature manner, never being blinded by subjectivity and prejudice.

In particular, he stressed, they should acquire a habit of repeatedly scrutinizing necessary information before making decisions on the issues related with the political destiny of people, and of prudently resolving them in the interests of the Party and the revolution.

Saying that for them to take warm care of and respect people never means that they should remain good-natured, blindly appeasing them, overlooking their faults and currying favour with them, he called on secretaries of primary Party committees to treat the employees with warm humanity and educate them in a principled manner while waging a fierce struggle against negative practices.

He said that secretaries of primary Party committees should acquire high qualifications in order to do the work with people well.

Stressing that today's socialist construction, whereby the grand goal is being attained in the arduous and difficult situation, requires secretaries of primary Party committees, tasked with educating, organizing and mobilizing people, to possess greater abilities than ever before, he said that the main task in improving their abilities is to be well versed in the Party's line and policies and proficient in the Party work.

Secretaries of primary Party committees should put above anything else the study of the documents on the Party Congress and the plenary meetings of the Party Central Committee that comprehensively deal with the Party's line and policies, and completely grasp them by repeatedly studying them on a regular basis so that they can be able to freely explain them among the masses, he noted.

He called on secretaries of primary Party committees to make it part of their everyday life to read the organ of the Party Central Committee in order to steadily improve their political and practical qualifications by grasping the ideas and intentions of the Party Central Committee on a normal basis and learning the methods of implementing the Party's policies.

He stressed the need for them to continue intensifying the study relating to Party work, learn more professional knowledge for their sectors and knowledge and technique for their units and steadily acquire lots of many-sided knowledge with the open-minded attitude as required by the developing times.

He underlined the need for them to gain experience and draw lessons from their work and possess meticulous organizing ability, strong control and persistent executive ability.

Noting that if secretaries of primary Party committees are to do the work with people well, they should have noble popular traits, he said that they will be disliked by people if they have a rude style of work, although they are politically and ideologically sound and have excellent working ability.

He stressed that strong Party spirit, fidelity to principle and noble humanity constitute the main traits befitting secretaries of primary Party committees and personal magnetism.

He called on them to have a warm heart with which to take sincere care of people and deeply love them and to lead them with the stand to take responsible care of the present life of the employees and even their future.

Noting that modesty, an unassuming character and uprightness are essential traits of primary Party committee secretaries as they do the work with people at all time, he said that they should always treat employees courteously and in a free-hearted manner with a smile on their faces and lead a simple life, not pursuing selfish interests and desires.

He said that they should keep their appearance neat and clean, use polite language and make positive efforts to have lots of cultural attainments and optimistic sentiments capable of touching people's hearts and creating an optimistic climate among them.

He specially stressed the need for the Party committee secretaries of ministries and national agencies and the secretaries of ri Party committees to enhance their responsibility and role.

Saying that the Party committee secretaries of ministries and national agencies are responsible for the Party work of the state administrative guidance organs organizing and guiding the work for implementing the line and policies of the Party on a nationwide scale, he called on them to lead all officials of their organs to steadily cultivate themselves through their Party life, political life, and to properly plan and guide the work for the implementation of the Party's policies, bearing in mind that they have very responsible tasks in a very responsible period.

He said that the Party Central Committee attaches great significance to enhancing the role of the Party committee secretaries of ministries and national agencies at present when epochal progress should be made in the overall state work and practical successes be achieved in the development of the national economy every year.

Noting that the duty of secretaries of ri Party committees is very heavy in the historic struggle for giving a complete facelift to the countryside, he called on them across the country to redouble their efforts, cherishing a high sense of honour and responsibility for conducting the Party work in the great new era of rural revolution.

He also stressed the need for departments of the Party Central Committee and provincial, city and county Party committees to pay close attention to the work for enhancing the role of secretaries of primary Party committees.

He underscored the need to direct efforts to the work for consolidating the ranks of primary Party committee secretaries and properly conduct the work for educating them and raising their practical abilities.

He noted that it is the mode of activities peculiar to our Party fully discharging its duty as a people's party, their "servant" party, for the Party Central Committee to set the people's desires as its policy and a state policy and for all the primary Party organizations to thoroughly implement it so as to make the people benefit from it, and that this is just the idea of the role of primary Party committees and the idea of attaching importance to the primary Party committees advocated by the Party Central Committee.

Saying that the true appearance of primary Party committee secretaries lies in the attitude of the servant who puts his heart and soul into bringing welfare to the people as much as possible, being thoughtful and meticulous like mother, he said that all secretaries of primary Party committees should remain consistent in such appearance to make sure that the Party lives up to the expectations of the people who have lavished praise on it as the motherly Party despite the violent tempest of history and stays faithful to its political idea and historic mission as a people's party, their "servant" party.

He ardently called on all secretaries of primary Party committees to turn out in the sacred struggle for providing the people with a happy life as early as possible and turning the country into a great powerful socialist state, well aware of their duty as political officials of a people's party, their "servant" party.

Kim Jong Un makes closing address at WPK conference of secretaries of primary committees

The respected Comrade Kim Jong Un delivered a closing address at the Second Conference of Secretaries of Primary Committees of the Workers' Party of Korea on February 28. The following is the full text:

Comrade secretaries of primary Party committees,

The Second Conference of Secretaries of Primary Committees of the Workers' Party of Korea, which is of great significance in vigorously propelling the implementation of the decisions of the Eighth Congress of the Party, has been held successfully amid the special expectations of all Party members and the high political enthusiasm of all its participants.

This conference has set up another milestone in infusing fresh vigour into the strengthening of the entire Party and ensuring more definite realization of the Party's leadership over the overall socialist construction by rearming secretaries of primary Party committees, who are in charge of basic organizations and major combat units of the Party, with the ideas, intentions and strategic policies of our Party Central Committee and awakening them so that they can make redoubled efforts.

It has reviewed and analyzed the five-year work for strengthening primary Party committees and advanced important tasks facing their secretaries at present in the successful fulfillment of the sacred mission of our Party, which exists for the people and which serves them, and the ways for implementing the tasks.

Seeing the participants engrossed in the discussion of the agenda with sincere attitude throughout the days of the conference, I have felt their ardent will to absorb the full the ideas of the Party Central Committee and apply them in the work of their committees so as to bring about a substantial revolutionary improvement in their work. I am gratified by it.

This conference will be etched in the history of our Party building as a meaningful conference in that it has provided a detailed action programme and practical weapon for strengthening the primary committees of the entire Party as required by our developing revolution, and has enriched the theory of our Party building.

Comrade secretaries of primary Party committees, At this conference the Party Central Committee has advanced the important idea that the secretaries of all primary Party committees should become genuine political workers of the people's party, their "servant" party.

Primary Party committees may differ from one another in the composition of the Party membership of their units, the sectors they are in charge of and the scope of their work, but the basic duties of their secretaries are the same and clear.

Secretaries of primary Party committees should approach and serve the people with the heart of a mother and with the attitude of their true servant, and carry out the Party's people-oriented policies without fail—this is the main spirit and main idea of the current conference.

However excellent our Party's people-oriented policies may be and however clear the ways of implementing them may be, they cannot be carried out effectively and the victorious advance of our socialist construction will be delayed as much if the primary Party organizations fail to play their roles properly.

This is why we liken a Party congress to a design institute and a primary Party committee to a building unit in construction, and proceeding from this, we attach importance to the roles played by secretaries of primary Party committees.

Secretaries of our primary Party committees should naturally conform and subordinate their thinking and action to the plans, intentions, and strategy and tactics of the Party Central Committee. Only then can the advanced struggle tasks be executed one by one and the people will enjoy the resultant benefits.

It is easier said than done for secretaries of primary Party committees to fulfil their responsibilities and duties satisfactorily today when we are faced with many obstacles and difficulties.

They should always be mindful of the spirit of the current conference and the tasks it has advanced for them, and deal with their heavy duties with extraordinary determination, ardent passion and unyielding fortitude.

Those who have been newly appointed should buckle down to their work with firm resolve from the outset, whereas those who have a longer term of service should work in an innovative way with renewed determination.

All of them should be better-versed in the Party's lines and policies than anybody else and observe, judge and deal with all issues with them as the standard. And they should ensure the progress of their respective units and perfect execution of the Party's policies through steady thinking, scrupulous organization, dynamic political work and personal examples.

At present the loyalty to the Party and the revolution on the part of secretaries of primary Party committees finds concentrated expression in their absolute and devoted service for the people.

Today our people, as they did yesterday, place their invariable trust in the Party alone, while overcoming all manner of trials and difficulties with an unyielding spirit.

If we are to provide these great and excellent people with a life and wellbeing that is an envy of the world, our Party should shoulder a greater burden and push ahead with the revolution and construction at a faster speed.

Instead of trying simply to endure the unheard-of conditions under which no one else would stand even a day, we are forcefully struggling to attain the ambitious and convincing targets and future we have set and designed for ourselves, and this is just aimed at bringing the centuries-old ideals and dreams of our people into reality at an earlier date; and our Party is unfolding a strong campaign to bring about a revolution in building up the whole ranks of cadres, and this is also aimed at helping them fulfil their responsibilities and duties they have assumed for this historic work as true, faithful servants of the people.

Secretaries of primary Party committees should not forget even a moment that they are there just for the people, and that they should devote their all for the people.

Although the people understand the actual situation of the country and do not express their agonies, they should go deeper among the people, and prove themselves worthy of their expectations with warm human feeling and further deepen the people's support to and trust in the Party.

When they read the people's minds, regard their agonies as their own and devote their true hearts to solve as many problems as possible for them, suffering mental anguish on their own, the masses will feel in their appearances the helping hand and warm care of our Party, a party of the people and a "servant" party for them.

I want to emphasize one more. They should bear in mind that if they are improper in their behaviour before the masses, the masses will give a wide berth to them and not follow them.

Before educating the masses, they should first be careful in their behaviour and purposefully correct the mistakes, if any, guard against the slightest elements of abuse of power, bureaucratism and corruption, and be honest in acquiring qualities appropriate to a genuine political worker of our Party.

Comrade secretaries of primary committees of the Party,

The ideals we have set are great and the struggle tasks are gigantic; and the challenges and obstacles ahead of our advance and development are formidable.

The contemporary tasks to which we have decided to commit ourselves must be accomplished on any account with our own hands and with a renewed struggle that requires greater efforts than those we have devoted so far.

He is a genuine communist who finds the true joy of life and the worth of making a revolution on the road for the people even though it may be an untrodden, arduous path.

Secretaries of primary Party committees and all other Party workers should renew their determination and fortitude, and show the people their fresh look by waging a vigorous do-or-die battle while boldly eradicating non-revolutionary and non-militant elements, and thus turning the Party's intentions and people-oriented policies into epoch-making realities year after year.

Issuing a militant and ardent appeal for the participants and all other secretaries of primary committees of the entire Party to launch a dynamic struggle in order to live up to the precious honour and heavy responsibility of a political worker of a people's party, their "servant" party, and to bring earlier the brilliant future when our great people will lead a cultured and rich life to their heart's content, I declare the Second Conference of Secretaries of Primary Committees of the Workers' Party of Korea closed.

MOUNTAINS TURN INTO GREEN FORESTS

By Jong Hwa Sun PT

Seven years have passed since General Secretary Kim Jong Un published his immortal work Let the Entire Party, the Whole Army and All the People Conduct a Vigorous Forest Restoration Campaign to Cover the Mountains of the Country with Green Woods on February 26 2015.

During the past years since then, the country's forests have undergone radical changes thanks to the patriotic enthusiasm of the people to turn all the mountains of the country into green forests as soon as possible.

After mapping out their ten-year plans for afforestation in a realistic way, all the provinces, cities and counties have solved by themselves all the problems arising in forest planting and protection, including securing seeds, sowing, producing saplings, planting trees and protecting land and ecological environment.

As a result, targets for the first stage of the forest restoration campaign have successfully been hit and the second-stage campaign is now underway in earnest.

The material and technical foundations for turning the whole country into forests and gardens have been provided during the campaign.

Such land- and labour-saving tree nurseries have been built to mass-produce saplings unaffected by season, including the Kangwon and North Hamgyong provincial tree nurseries, and forest equipment and materials factories have sprung up in provinces, cities and counties.

Last year, the North Hamgyong and North Phyongan provincial forest science institutes were built and inaugurated.

Sci-tech problems arising in breeding trees, afforestation and forest protection have also been solved.

A technology of creating forests of densely planting improved variety of pine nut tree has been completed and remarkable progress has been made in bringing earlier the fruit gathering year of Evodia daniellii, mass-producing the saplings of a new variety of delicious chestnut with great per-hectare yield, creating forests of an improved variety of scabuckthorn tree and planting wild fruit trees of great economic value.

Researchers have succeeded in acclimatizing a good variety of blueberry which has grown in the area north of 40 degrees north latitude in the country to cultivate them in the area south of 40 degrees north latitude.

Various kinds of root protective agents, growth stimulants and nutritive activators have been developed to ensure the high rooting rate of planted trees and other production bases have been built in different parts of the country. And success has been achieved in the research to plant trees in all seasons unaffected by season.

Primary attention has been paid to preventing forest fire and blight damage and activities have been conducted to reduce dependence on forests in all parts of the country.

The movement to win the title of Forest of Socialist Patriotism is also gaining momentum.

Last year alone, more than 400 units took an active part in creating and protecting forests and turned those in their charge into thick woods and gardens, thus being awarded the title.

With the forest restoration campaign becoming mass-based today, the forest resources of the country are steadily increasing.

Forests associated with love for country

By Kim Il Jin PT

There stands Munsu Hill in Tongdaewon District, Pyongyang, which is called thus as it is as beautiful as a golden tapestry. It is not so high, but it commands the nice surrounding scenery as it rises on a plain.

The hill is a revolutionary site where President Kim Il Sung, Chairman Kim Jong Il and anti-Japanese war heroine Kim Jong Suk planted trees on April 6 1947.

Pak Hyon Ui, director of the Munsu hill revolutionary site management station, said: "Before Korea's liberation (August 15 1945), the Japanese imperialist invaders deforested the forested hill recklessly as they built barracks and air-raid shelters, thereby disfiguring the picturesque hill. President Kim Il Sung, who had formulated an ambitious plan for covering all the mountains of his country with thick forests after liberation during the anti-Japanese war, climbed Munsu Hill on April 6 1947 and pointed to the need to vigorously plant trees as an all-people campaign and protect forests as he described afforestation as an undertaking to be carried out under a far-reaching plan so as to improve the people's livelihood and hand down to posterity rich forest resources and beautiful mountains and rivers."

True to his instruction, the management station exerts itself to turn the hill associated with his revolutionary activities into a beautiful park and cultural recreation area for Pyongyang citizens.

According to Han Ung Ryong, staffer of the station, the station built a database containing over 10 000 pieces of data needed for forest planting and management at the sci-tech learning space and employees study there for over two hours every day grouped by workteams. They produce such agricultural chemicals as sulphur mixture to prevent damage from harmful insects. Especially, the biopesticide developed by Pak Sang Chol, researcher at the station, is very helpful to raising rooting rate as a root activator.

"We also pay due attention to preventing forest fire. Under the assignment system per square metre, we encourage fire watchers to enhance their responsibility and role, while getting fully ready the materials for forest fire prevention," said Ri Kwang Jin, workteam leader.

Thanks to their efforts, the hill is now covered with forests. And various fruit trees and flowering shrubs, such as apricot, chestnut, apple and pear trees, magnolia, rose of Sharon, azalea and rose, grow here and there to add beauty to the natural scenery.

Last year, the management station was awarded the title of socialist patriotism forest.

Song of Ploughing keeps resounding

By To Kyong Chol PT

There is a song that rings out of every farm field of the DPRK every spring. It is Song of Ploughing.

Whenever they sing or listen to the song, the Korean people recollect the days in spring a year after Korea's liberation when the whole country was full of vim and vigour.

On March 5 1946, General Kim Il Sung promulgated the law on agrarian reform.

Peasants made up the majority of the population of Korea after liberation. Before liberation, they had been compelled to serve as farmhands through generations and although they toiled and moiled, they were unable to support their children as they had no land of their own.

It was their long-cherished desire to do farming on their own land to their heart's content at that time.

Sympathizing with their centuries-old desire, Kim Il Sung proclaimed that land would go to the tillers.

Through the reform, more than 980 000 hectares of land owned by the Japanese imperialists and such pro-Japanese elements as landlords were confiscated and distributed gratis to peasants with no or scanty land.

It was a historic event that promoted them to the status of owners of land from its slaves.

The Korean peasants worked very hard to increase crop yields in great delight of cultivating their own land for the first time in their life.

Their life filled with delight gave birth to the words and melody of a famous song.

Joy pervades the land of new masters.

Spring wavelets ripple in newly created paddies.

Oh, the land given by our General.

Eruhwa, teruhwa, let us till to the last square inch.

The line Oh, the land given by our General reflected the tillers' gratitude and single mind to return the favour to Kim Il Sung who satisfied their earnest desire and enabled them to lead a hope-filled life.

Singing the song, the Korean farmers reaped a bumper crop in the year after liberation.

A farmer described a radical change in his life as follows:

"My family cultivates 2 400 phyong of paddy fields, 3 000 phyong of dry fields and 500 phyong of fields for growing vegetables, cotton and potatoes. My family of nine enjoys a plentiful life and I and my brothers study in spare time."

For the Korean people, the land was not merely a place to step on, but their cradle of happiness and the whole of their life.

While singing the song, they drove the carts loaded with grains they produced to the capital city of Pyongyang for the donation of them towards the building of a new Korea, applied themselves to farming to offer active assistance to the front during the fierce Fatherland Liberation War.

The Koreans are now out in the struggle to herald a new era of development of the socialist countryside, singing Song of Ploughing which tells them the real truth that the people's destiny can be carved out in an independent way and exalted generation after generation only under the guidance of great leaders.

New era of rural development begins

By Chae Hyang Ok PT

The Fourth Plenary Meeting of the Eighth Central Committee of Workers' Party of Korea emphasized the need to put the country's agriculture on a definite upward stage and open up a new great era of effecting drastic development of socialist countryside by pushing ahead with rural development under the uplifted slogan of "For new victory of socialist rural construction!"

And it set the raising of the level of ideological awareness of agricultural workers, the rapid development of agricultural productive forces and a fundamental change in the living environment of the countryside as the targets to be achieved in Korean-style rural development.

To make agricultural workers main players and masters of rural development is the main task in socialist rural construction and a key factor for its success.

Lots of hero and patriotic farmers who devoted their all to national prosperity and increased grain output were produced in the annals of the Korean revolution.

An undertaking for arming the agricultural workers with patriotic spirit is briskly conducted and, in the course of this, their enthusiasm to contribute to the prosperity of the socialist country with rice is growing higher.

It is the main task of the rural development strategy to solve the food problem of the country by boosting agricultural production.

Now the agricultural sector is faced with the tasks of pushing rice and wheat farming, increasing the production of meat, milk and eggs by putting efforts into the development of animal husbandry and achieving the fruit production target along with the task of attaining the grain production goal under the new five-year plan.

At the same time, it should boost the production of fresh vegetables and highly nutritious mushrooms with an eye to supply them to the people on a regular basis, and also step up the production of such industrial crops as oil-bearing and sugar crops and sericulture.

When these tasks are carried out, the level of the people's dietary life can be raised, the demand for grains satisfied and substantial results achieved in implementing urgent tasks whose fulfillment is much waited by the people.

To this end, the country's agriculture should be converted into an advanced one and the stable and sustained growth of agricultural production should be made with science and technology as the major driving force of agricultural development.

The study of agricultural science and technology, the dissemination of advanced farming techniques for expanding the horizons of agricultural workers and improve their technical knowledge and skills and the buildup of the technical forces of farms are being pressed on and such practices of doing farming by relying on old experience is being overcome.

A task of special importance in the rural development strategy is to spruce up farm villages.

To build all the farm villages of the country into those that preserve the features of socialism and regional characteristics is a must not only for providing rural residents with excellent living environment but also for achieving the comprehensive development of the country.

For the successful implementation of the plan, dynamic efforts are being made to provide strong state support, operate the powerful state guidance system and enhance the role of cities and counties directly responsible for local construction.

When villages boasting modern and distinctive architectural beauty are built in rural communities, epochal changes will be brought about in not only the living environment of agricultural workers but also their ideological consciousness and the level of civilization and the country will undergo a remarkable transformation.

Greatest love and respect for mothers and wives

By Ri Sung Ik PT

With International Women's Day near at hand, people think of how hard mothers and wives have striven to fulfil their duty and responsibility as women in their families and society while overcoming all hardships on the strength of affection.

A good gardener grows a beautiful flower and a competent teacher is behind an excellent student. Likewise, good mothers and wives are always behind the people who are held in respect and congratulated by the public and collectives.

Even in the hard times when the country had to suffer difficulties, they never failed to discharge their duty as mothers and wives.

Their affection was not confined to their families.

Many women married disabled soldiers, became daughters of childless old people and adopted and brought up parentless children well for society and the state in order to lessen the burden on the country. And they make a contribution to the country's prosperity by vigorously turning one of the two wheels of socialist construction.

The reality has produced such impressive words as "mother of soldiers", "girl mother" and "daughter of the Workers' Party of Korea".

Among such women there are deputies to the Supreme People's Assembly dealing with state affairs, heroines, officials in charge of factories and farms, innovators widely known to the whole country, soldiers who defend the defence lines of the country, scientists, technicians and sportspeople who hoisted the national flag of the DPRK in international competitions.

Korean women are flowers of families, society and the country under the socialist system in which the people are masters of everything and women enjoy respect of all.

On the occasion of the international women's day, the whole country shows profound affection and respect to the women who devote their love, wisdom and passion to their families and society.

In the DPRK, women's rights are guaranteed by the Socialist Constitution, the Law on Protection of Women's Rights, the Socialist Labour Law and many other laws and state policies and it has become a social tendency and noble virtue to respect their personality.

The Law on Sex Equality was promulgated in July 1946, the year after Korea's liberation from Japanese military rule (August 15 1945). Since then, the Korean women have been provided with equal rights with men by law and system.

On this legal ground and under such social system, they fully and proudly exercise their rights as members of society.

They freely take part in the elections of power organs and have the rights to elect and be elected irrespective of their occupations and property status.

Ordinary women workers are elected as deputies to the Supreme People's Assembly to discuss political affairs of the country and many women exercise their political rights at Party and government organs and working people's organizations.

They also receive immense state and social benefits.

As they give birth to their children, they receive all medical assistance needed for the treatment of women's diseases free of charge at the Pyongyang Maternity Hospital, a comprehensive medical service facility

It is also called yellow rhododendron and yellow Patrina villosa.

It is called manbyongcho in Korean, meaning a herb curing all kinds of diseases.

The plant with beautiful flowers is very viable and grows in cold areas. And it produces flowers even in snow to add beauty to alpine landscape.

It grows 20 or 50 centimeters tall and the prostrate stems spread out in large numbers.

The sap of rhododendron begins to rise in the plant in mid-February and it comes into bud and flowers from March. Light yellow flowers bloom at the edges of stems. The calyx is very small, the corolla is in the shape of a bell with its end part split into five directions. The floral buds that appear in a year bloom at a temperature higher than 0°C consuming their stored substances in the following year. The leaves are oval and their edges bend backward to form the shape of a cylinder so as to prevent the evaporation of their absorbed humidity and preserve nutritive substances. The leaves are thick and leathery. The fruit is also oval with brown hairs on it. The plant can be multiplied by separating the roots or from seed. The leaves contain andromedotoxin, flavonoid, ursolic acid and so on. What does she want GOLD MEDALS for?

The dignity of the country is in the gold medal. Both my honour and dignity are in the dignity of the country."

Kim Mi Rae, woman diver of the Pyongyang Sports Club

By Yun Ki Song PT

Kim Mi Rae (pictured), a diver of the Pyongyang Sports Club, is one of the top ten players of the DPRK in 2021.

In her childhood, she got basic training in artistic gymnastics at Sosong District Juvenile Sports School. But after finishing the primary school, she changed her event and started training in diving at the Pyongyang Sports Club.

She was soon spotted as a promising reserve diver because she was faster and more powerful than others and had a keen sense of space.

Moreover, the new movement of diving after a triple and half backward somersault which she was practising drew the attention of experts.

Kim learned from her seniors' experiences to complete the movement, and frequented the sports science institute to put it on a scientific basis.

Consequently, she performed the movement in the event of women's 10m platform diving at the 2014 national championships.

Later, she kept practising the movement to further perfect it.

She thus could enter the rankings in the women's 10m platform synchronized event and the mixed 10m platform synchronized event at the FINA Grand Prix diving competition in 2015 and the 17th FINA world diving championships in Hungary.

"The dignity of the country is in the gold medal. Both my honour and dignity are in the dignity of the country," Kim said after being asked about her impression of winning at that time.

For the success, she received the title of Merited Athlete and was nominated as one of the top ten players of the DPRK in 2017.

Last year, after further improving her special movement, she took the first place in both the women's individual 10m platform diving event and the mixed 10m platform synchronized event at the Mangyongdae Prize Games held to celebrate the Day of the Sun (birthday of President Kim Il Sung) and won the gold medal in the women's individual 10m platform diving event at the national championships.
